

Scam Artists Continue to Use Social Media for Victim Targeting August 8, 2017 - You might think that you are more likely to fall victim to a scam sent through email than through social media. But social media is actually quite effective at luring victims in. That's because social media connections are usually people you know. When a friend reaches out to you with a great deal, you are probably going to be more easily enticed than if you receive an email from a complete stranger. Unfortunately, that friend may actually be an imposter. CBS News recently put together a report on this that we found quite informative. We hope you do too.

Tweet

```
(function() {
var s = document.createElement('SCRIPT'), s1 = document.getElementsByTagName('SCRIPT')[0];
s.type = 'text/javascript';
s.src = 'http://widgets.digg.com/buttons.js';
s1.parentNode.insertBefore(s, s1);
})();
```

```
(function() {
var po = document.createElement('script'); po.type = 'text/javascript'; po.async = true;
po.src = 'https://apis.google.com/js/plusone.js';
var s = document.getElementsByTagName('script')[0]; s.parentNode.insertBefore(po, s);
})();
```

byJim Malmberg

Note: When posting a comment, please sign-in first if you want a response. If you are not registered, click here.
Registration is easy and free.

Follow me on Twitter:

Follow ACCESS