

ACCESS Launches RSS News Feeds

Allows users to follow credit & privacy news via their favorite newsreaders

WASHINGTON - Thursday, Nov 11, 2004 - Today American Consumer Education Support Services (ACCESS), a non-profit organization, announced the launch of its internet RSS News feeds.

"RSS news feeds are the hottest method of content distribution available to websites today," said Jim Malmberg, of ACCESS. "Our feeds feature the same content that is available to users through our web site but they offer the added convenience of allowing users who utilize RSS to receive regular updates without having to visit the site.

Current feeds include a front page RSS feed, bringing users all of the headlines that are published on the ACCESS site, as well as fees on Identity Theft, Consumer Credit, and Personal Privacy. The feeds can be accessed via the ACCESS website at <http://www.GuardMyCreditFile.org>. They are in the "Links" section of the site. They are also listed in Yahoo! feed directory for My Yahoo! and through the directory at CompleterSS.
